

Apostille Archive - English Version

Archive Commentary

This archive is not merely a technical repository of PDF files, nor is it a private collection of court decisions. It is a structured array of documents authenticated with an apostille—that is, confirmed by a mechanism operating within the system established under the Hague Conference on Private International Law.

The apostille certifies the authenticity of a signature and the status of an official. It does not certify the legality of the content of a judicial act. This distinction is central to understanding the purpose of the archive.

Purpose of Publishing the Archive

The archive was created to: (1) Establish the chronology of judicial decisions; (2) Demonstrate procedural inconsistencies; (3) Analyze recurring structural patterns; (4) Identify signs of institutional impunity; (5) Support cascade judicial rehabilitation. This is not about the fate of a single individual, but about examining how the system responds to allegations of torture and serious violations.

Connection to Article 17 of the Rome Statute

Article 17 of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court establishes the principle of complementarity. International jurisdiction is activated if the state: (1) is unwilling to carry out a genuine investigation, or (2) is objectively unable to do so. The archive allows the reader to pose the question: Is a genuine investigation taking place into allegations of torture? Or is there formal proceedings simulating judicial activity?

Conclusion

This archive is a tool for analysis. It does not automatically prove the existence of a crime. It shows the structure of decisions. The key question, [REDACTED] 17 Rome Statute: Was a genuine investigation carried out or was there justice simulation? The answer defines the boundary between state domestic jurisdiction and international responsibility.
